Student Bands

McCalmon

Throughout my four years at Rice, I have often heard complaints about the success-oriented, apathetic, homogeneous student body here. This accusation is not hard to believe when one learns that one of the hottest issues on campus during the spring semester of 1988 was the unforewarned one dollar surcharge by Central Kitchen for a shrimp dinner. Probably one of the largest student reactions in Rice history was recorded that night, when the majority of residential students boycotted the dinner and ordered pizza instead. Well, at least Rice students are interested in economic principles; they won't stand for being ripped off.

How about political issues? Did the U.S. Honduran activity in March fire up any Rice peace activists? Not really. What about the Presidential primaries? Who won? Don't ask us. However, if Rice students are not as politically interested or activated as students from most other universities, we are motivated in at least two areas.

The first is socially: our volunteer coordinating organization, RSVP (The Rice Student Volunteer Organization), has consistently mobilized large numbers of student volunteers with projects such as Outreach Day and the Students Against Hunger Cleanup Day.

The second area, I have come to believe while researching and interviewing for this article, is musically. The Rice Radio, KTRU, has always offered an eclectic alternative to the mundane Top 40 Houston stations. Just recently, however, Rice students have begun to seriously produce and perform their own music, with some exciting and surprising results. In the last couple of years, Rice students have produced at least four full time bands, as well as many potential groups of musicians that will probably be well known by the time this article is published.

Rice is not as homogeneous as it appears at first glance. A small but potent underground movement of artists, musicians and actors continually irritates and fascinates the more traditional elements registered here. The band Sprawl seems to musically represent this underground. Very well known and appreciated because of their sincerity and intensity, but not as widely followed as some of the more conventional bands, Sprawl is probably the most interesting, innovative and dedicated band that Rice has ever produced.

Sprawl's style of music and performance can best be described as energetic and unique. At one of their practices, I asked them to characterize themselves — their band and their music. Some of the comments I received were:

"Our music's post-punk power funk," contributed Dan Robinson, the lead guitarist. At first I took him very seriously, but then I remembered that Dan was also the band member who told me that SPRAWL stood for Save Pete Rose's Ancient Western Lingo. Actually, they tell me, it stands for Sometimes Prostitutes Reveal a Wet Leg.

"I think it's fun!" Matt Kelley added, slightly sarcastically. No doubt there. Anyone who has ever seen a Sprawl concert knows that Matt Kelley has fun. With his loose limbs flying as he raps like he was born with a microphone in his hand, Matt is the music when he performs. I was lucky enough to be asked to sing back-up vocals to one of their raunchier songs, "King of Parking," for a show at Blythe

by Amy Orchard

“Mostly I’m Just Blue-Green Slime”:

The explosion of the Rice Music Scene

Spirits in March. Raunchy is an understatement. The dance floor cleared as only the bravest Sprawl fans and followers slam-danced and passed out, while the band, singing about a raunchy guy and his raunchy girl (“She’s the King of Parking, the Parking King”), taunted the audience.

“It’s about being alive,” explained Nick Cooper, the drummer and true core of the band. Nick writes the lyrics with Matt, and composes the music along with Dan and Jeff Nunnally, the bass guitarist. At practices and performances, Nick is the undisputed director of the show, pointing his drumstick at anyone who needs dealing with. Nick has years of experience, having lived and performed in New York. He has probably influenced the band’s style the most, drawing from his favorite band, the Minutemen.

“We’ve got more problems than Morrison and more compassion than U2,” claims Pab Schwendimann, the trumpet player. Well, perhaps his is a slightly inflated assertion, but Sprawl does seem to care a lot about the quality and originality of their music. They practice often, and plan to go play in New York this summer.

However, the members describe it, the band plays a kind of funk-rap combination with sometimes hilarious, sometimes portentous, but always slightly esoteric lyrics, such as, “Hey man, wanna go get totally extinct? No way, I’m pretty endangered already.” — from “Erosion.” In live shows, their pieces incorporate everything: personalities in the band, body movement, sound effects, random audience members. Their’s is not simply a musical concert, but a performance. In addition to those already mentioned, Sprawl includes Clay Embry on saxophone, Bonny McNairn on saxophone and flute, and Doug Markley on trombone.

The Bat Surfers, who were formed at Jones College in 1984/5, claim to be the first real Rice band to consistently play at parties and other college functions. The group’s main influences, as described by Lance Benedict, lead guitarist, are early 1960s instrumental surf, garage psychedelic, and soul. This combination of musical styles may seem kind of bizarre, but the Bat Surfers manage to effectively incorporate these unusual elements to end up with a fun, interesting, offbeat, and competent band. Their logo is a sort of hallucinogenic beach scene with a Bat

In addition, the band writes a lot of their own music. One of their more memorable pieces is “What do You Want from Me?”, a kind of wailing, driving lament on a shaky relationship. The Bat Surfers include: Dennis Ogburn, guitar et al; Lance Benedict, lead guitar; Jeff Byers, keyboards; Evan Will, bass guitar; and Ethan Brown, drums.

Just Add Water, one of the newer bands at Rice, was formed by Jordi and Jean-Pierre Baizan. Singing back-up vocals are Dawn Sheridan and Kristen Baker, both voice majors from the Sheperd School. The drummer, lead guitarist and bass player are neighborhood friends from Strake Jesuit High School. In the fall of 1987, Jordi told the organizers of the Casino Party that his band would play for the party that night. However, at the time, he didn’t have a band, so he and his brother put one together as quickly as possible. Thus, the name.

The members of Just Add Water play basically party and dance rock, with a song list including: the Cure, Modern English, Talking Heads and U2. They concentrate on having fun and playing music they know people will like and be familiar with, as is obvious by the large crowds that show up and the enthusiastic reception they receive when they play.

Just Add Water has performed many times around Rice and the Medical Center in the short time they have been together. Besides the Casino Party, they have played at College Nights, RSVP charity dances, and the huge med school Tropics Party. “There is a definite market for us,” explains Jordi. He’s right: they’re a fun, talented band with great songlist and the ability to pinpoint what people like.

The difference with ETC is the type of music they play. Whereas most bands concentrate on Top 40, New Wave, Funk or 60’s, ETC emphasizes classic, mainstream, dance rock. Their cover list includes: Golden Earring, ZZ Top, Eric Clapton, Jimmy Hendrix, The Beatles, The Romantics, and Billy Idol. No other

“We’ll play our next song now, if anyone cares!”

— Dennis Ogburn, lead singer of the Bat Surfers, to an older, disinterested, Compaq Computer audience.

Man-style bat in the foreground.

Like Sprawl, the Bat Surfers have their own small but dedicated following, complete with Bat Surfer T-shirts and uninhibited enthusiasm. As is evident in any Bat Surfer show, playing music they know people will like and relating to the audience during performances are important components of their philosophy. Old college favorites like “Louie, Louie” and “Wild Thing” are played often; consequently, crowds get spastic (Unless the audience is an older Compaq Computer crowd). They strive to maintain a “dance-oriented, but underground” style akin to that of New York nightclubs, and consider themselves original artists in an overworked medium.

No other band at Rice has combination of songs quite like theirs.

ETC started when Brad Bush, Sean Callahan, Jeff Pendleton, Chris Rose, and Dennis Abbot, all Baker class of 1989, decided to start playing together their freshman year. Last year, they added Chris Rose, from Will Rice, as their lead vocalist.

ETC basically started, as do most bands, to have fun. Most of them did not have very much experience, but they began practicing every Saturday, and soon they began to play at parties and other events around Rice. They've played at Willy's Pub, Baker College Night, the Sid Tower Party, and at a High School Prom. In the future, ETC can probably be seen playing a lot more around campus. In addition, two of the members are starting a spin-off band called Meister Eckhart.

At the time this article was written, these four bands were the most established and well-known at Rice. The music scene is growing so fast here, though, that by the fall semester of 1988, there will probably be a lot more. Other bands to watch for are: Wasted Potential, which originally started by playing accompaniment in Rice musicals, is now diversifying, and includes some of the most talented musicians here; Freudian Slip, started by freshman from Baker; and Meister Eckhart. Pretty soon, the conventional meeting inquiries might not be, "What's your major? What college are you in?" but, "What do you play? What band are you in?"

Academic Athletes

Making time for both sports and homework

Most schools which compete in Division 1A athletics have two types of students: students who study and students who play varsity sports. At Rice, there are also students who study. But a unique feature of Rice is that there are also varsity athletes who do a substantial amount of schoolwork. Coupling these two full time activities — being a Rice student with being a Division 1A athlete — can be tremendously fulfilling to those who are able to juggle the two successfully; but for most, the bottom line comes down to one's priorities. Either compete or study; a high GPA and physical prowess are mutually exclusive for most Rice athletes.

The Rice athlete is “My social life is gone”

main reason,” he said. Rick Holmes, a junior MechE basketball player from Wiess, is more succinct: in an attempt to balance schoolwork and athletics, “you don’t sleep much.” Holmes says he has trained himself not to think about being tired.

“I’ve been doing it long enough that I can put it out of my mind that I'm tired," he said.

Ben Mathews, a Hanszen Baseball MechE., is a Rice Academic All-America selection: the requirements for this are to have a 3.2 GPA and compete as a starter for a varsity team. Enduring the Rice engineering curriculum is not a requirement, but Mathews has been able to overcome this obstacle by giving up his social life and sleep. "There are times when I get very frustrated. I have spent several Saturday nights working, and many Sundays I get up at 7 am and spend all day studying." Jeff Hood, a WRC EE with a 3.3, says "You have to want to do it." Indeed. "It" refers to studying effectively while performing well on the playing field. Have you ever noticed how many Rice athletes are recognized nationally? Not many. What percentage of the names on the President's Honor roll are scholarship athletes? Very few. Does this mean our athletes are clumsy and stupid too?

Absolutely not. What it means is that most Rice athletes are under more pressure than most Rice students can fathom. Think about it — take your course load with all the homework you have to do . . . then factor in daily practices and weight training; not to mention team meetings and missing class due to trips. It really is like having a full time job to contend with.

How can we expect our athletes to perform to the best of their ability under these conditions? How can we expect them to compete with other Rice students in the typical Rice classroom? We can't. That is why Rice athletics is in the sorry situation it is now. Rice has coaches that place academics first because at Rice U., academics come first. The result: inferior athletic performance. "I definitely think that schoolwork cuts back on my performance. In high school I didn't have to worry about school and could concentrate on athletics," said Bill Gardner. Jeff Hood concurs, "It's a lot harder for the Rice athlete to reach his/her full potential here than, for example, at A&M." Consider some of majors from SWC schools: Tech: "Agricultural Education", "Animal Production", "Family Relations"; A&M: "General Studies"; TCU: "Radio-TV major", "Speech Communication," "Recreational Leadership." These make ManaStuds seem like doctoral candidates. The bottom line is that the athletes at Rice are at a disadvantage because they must endure the academic rigor of this university.

This disadvantage is felt both in the classroom and on the playing field. "I do feel a disadvantage versus other EE's," said Jeff Hood. "After lifting, running, attending team meetings, I get tired and it's not as easy for me to do homework at night as it is for someone who took a three hour nap in the afternoon." There is also a trend common to various Rice athletic teams which correlates performance with time in the semester. It seems as though as the semester wears on, teams at Rice seem to be less and less successful at avoiding the "L" column. The reason for this is that immediately comes to mind is that academic pressure begins to supersede athletic pressure. Athletes shift their priorities in order to maintain a GPA they can live with. This trend was particularly noticeable in the volleyball team's performance this past fall, as well as the football team. Most athletes, however, note that the competition is usually more intense toward the end of the season, and thus the trend can not be traced solely to increasing academic pressure. "With the baseball team, fatigue is a consideration, but you have to consider that the team plays its SWC schedule at the end of the Spring," Mathews said.

So why do Rice athletes put themselves through such agony? Many would say that they are on full scholarships and it is the price that has to be paid to gain a full ride. But if this is the case, then being an athlete is more like a full time job that is performed in order to finance an education. Is this an exaggeration? Not really. Former volleyball player Lara Epperson notes, "I'm sure that over half the athletes at one or more times have considered their sport to be a job." Richard Holmes adds, "Sometimes you think that way — during preseason conditioning it's like drudgery," he said. The major reason why athletes put up with this is because of money. And scholarships are not guaranteed. If an athlete blows off practice too often — due to academic commitments, perhaps — the scholarship goes. "With some of the athletic programs, people have problems with the coaches but won't speak out because they are afraid of losing their scholarship," Epperson said. Lara quit the volleyball team in mid-season last year, though academic considerations were not involved in her decision.

Thus with the Rice athletes there are no guarantees. In fact, they even have to work to find time in their schedule to have any social life. Ben Mathews notes that of the following three categories, a Rice athlete is able to be good at only two: academics, athletics, and social life. Rich Holmes' response to this is "Even two is tough. My social life is gone." But on team trips the players have time and screw around, right? "Up at SMU we went to their library and had study hall for two hours on Saturday morning," Holmes said. Could you imagine Aggies coming to Rice for a game and checking out study rooms at Fondren for a few hours?

Athletes at Rice have much to be proud of regardless of the reputation Rice has for athletics. They are driven to endure what others would consider pure torture. "You have to have discipline, be dedicated and be able to decide on where your priorities lie," Mathews said. "If I weren't on the baseball team, I'd just procrastinate more," he continued. Holmes also spoke of priorities. "I love playing basketball, and I like being a student. If I picked one, I could probably be better at it, but I don't know I'd be a better person if I only did one." Well, Rich, most people at Rice are only students and most athletes at other Div 1A schools are not students. Are they better people? I think not.

"I'm sure that over half the athletes at one or more times have considered their sport to be a job"

OUTREACH: STUDENTS AND COMMUNITY

Fight Night Coordinator Bob McGaughey presenting the event proceeds to SHAPE.

Participants of Mock Beer-Bike, a Baker fundraiser to benefit Houston Food Bank.

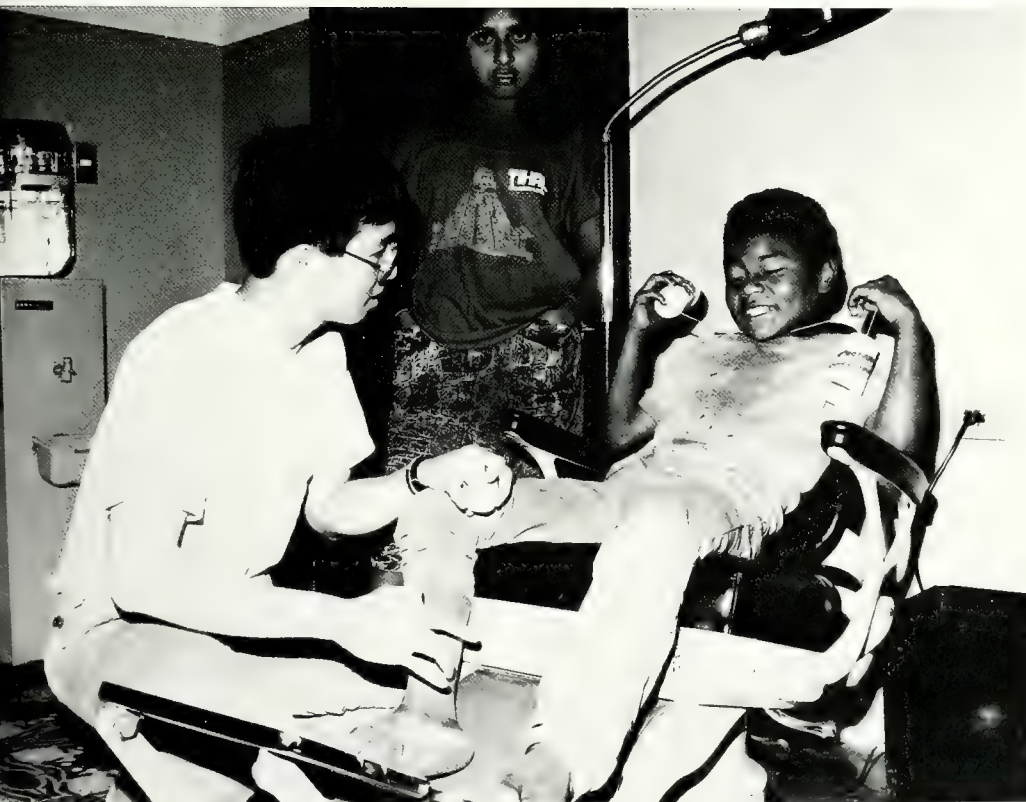

Every Rice student knows about RSVP Outreach Day. After all, how could you not — with a banner on the library, posters in the colleges, and RSVP Reps waiting eagerly to sign you up. This year, over 600 students, faculty, and staff participated in 42 different activities.

However, as is the aim of RSVP, student philanthropy is not limited to just one day out of the year. In fact, many organizations besides RSVP have committed themselves to community service. Rice Republicans held a canned food drive. And for the past three years (longer than RSVP has existed), Baker has held a mock beer bike to benefit the Houston Food Bank. This year, they raised over $2200.

Other colleges sponsored charitable events as well. Hanszen threw Fight Night, a boxing event where men from different colleges squared off in the ring for the benefit of the SHAPE (Self-Help for African Peoples through Education) community center. Bloody noses galore, but all for a good cause. Less violent was the Brown/Lovett TG raising money for Texas Children's Hospital. Featured in the dunking booth were such great targets as SA Presidents, Jerry Berndt, and Gallery Furniture "Mac."

The colleges serve as a natural base of support for community outreach programs. They have the leadership structure, the manpower and the resources necessary to stage events. At other universities, fraternities and sororities are often the leaders in philanthropy. The difference is that fraternities are required to do community service; the colleges choose to.

World Premiere of Universified!

This spring, Hamman Hall premiered Tom Senning's first musical, titled Universified! Originally slated for production in the fall under the title of The Jimmie Shock, the musical underwent numerous revisions of both script and score before it was finally produced by the Rice Players in February. Senning consulted frequently with director Sandy Havens as well as the cast members before the show reached its final stage. "I haven't been to classes this semester," Senning commented to the Rice Thresher, "And you should see my room."

When the show actually opened, the reviews were relatively favorable. Critics from the Post, the Chronicle and Public News commended the work of playwright Senning as well as the performances of the cast, some of whom were new to Rice theater. By the second week, the show was nearly sold out. Universified! closed on Saturday, February 20 to a standing ovation of almost ten minutes. In the late spring, the musical won Sammy Awards for Best Musical, Best Male Performance in a Musical (Jamie Daruwala as Jim), Best Female Performance in a Musical (Dawn Sheridan as Sunny), and Best Lighting Design.

Constructed as a series of vignettes, the musical follows eight seniors in the hours before their graduation.

Through a variety of memories, the "university experience" of the students is brought to life. The characters reminisce about dirty laundry, insensitive roommates and nights at the campus pub while they try to come to terms with the "real world" that they're about to enter before they sing of their "Everlasting Bond" in the show's finale. In the title scene, the character Jim is confronted by the founder's statue that has come to life: "Ooh! My ass hurts!" The statue taunts Jim with the fact that the university has taken four years of his life, four years' worth of tuition and in return has given him very little: "... I'm gonna get you ... Universified!"

Although the name Rice University is never mentioned, it was obvious what was Senning's inspirational source. Familiar names were changed to easily recognizable facsimiles: Hermann Park became Sherman Park, Two Pesos became Three Burritos. The guys sang about how "Upperclassmen Get Women," while the women lamented that "There's No Love In College." But the play wasn't just trite. The memories shared by the characters on stage created a living portrait of the "Rice experience," capturing the essence of the college years of anyone's life with witty lyrics and clever lines.

Sammy's New Suit

Thanks to the efforts of Sammy mascots Mike Madden and Bob Truscott and the financial support of students, the SA, and the Athletic Department, Sammy finally got a new suit. Gone was the comfortable, harmless old owl and in its place was a sharp-looking fighter. Student reaction was mixed, but many hoped that if Sammy looked tough, the team might be tough. However, the new suit didn't seem to make much difference as Rice went 2-9. In any case, the new Sammys, Deron Neblitt and Paul Bushkill are the ones who will have to deal with the head-to-toe suit in the heat of September.

Alcohol Policy Revision

On September 1st, the drinking age will have been 21 for two years. In the interim, Rice has struggled to establish a workable student-enforced alcohol policy.

This year two new plans were tried: a campus police checklist system that failed and the student monitor system which is still being refined. Despite attempts to educate the student population, many still view the monitors as student "police", a fact reported in Newsweek's On Campus, and which has resulted in the resignation of several monitors. Another alcohol-policy related incident occurred when WRC Social Coordinator Robert Nevill was fined after misrepresenting the number of people planned for a party. In spite of these events, Assistant Director of Student Activities Lois Waldron reports that "the alcohol policy is working much better." However, nearly two years after its institution, the question still remains about where the responsibility for drinking lies: with the drinker himself, the party coordinator, the college, or the university.

Willy does a 180°

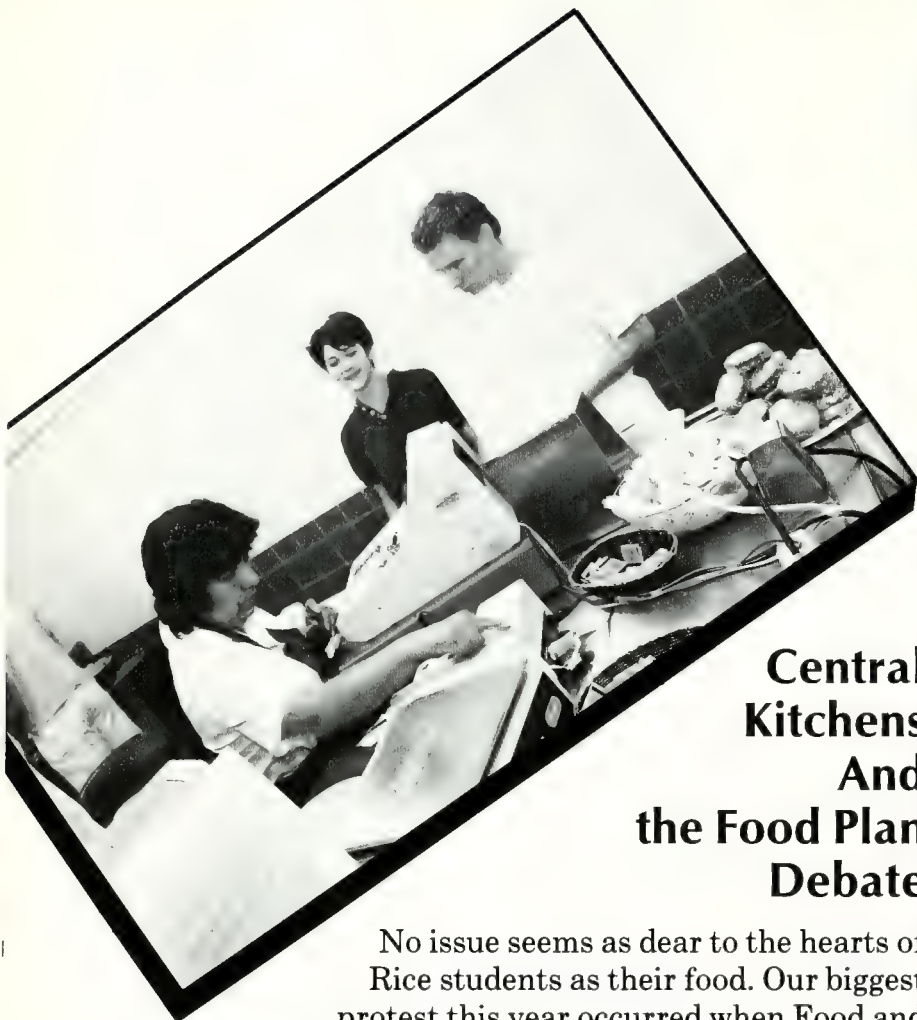

by Lisa Gray

Using an A-frame, a pick-up truck, and their ingenuity, a group of Wiess College students and alumni rotated Willy's Statue, the 2,000 lb. statue that sits on the tomb of the university's founder. To avoid being caught, the group painted the A-frame black and disconnected a flood-light every night for a month so the campus police wouldn't be suspicious when the light was off. Despite the group's efforts, however, the campus police did catch one of them as he drove away from the scene.

That student, Patrick Dyson, was placed on disciplinary probation and told to pay the costs of returning Willy to his original position facing Lovett Hall. To raise the money, Dyson, and his friends sold t-shirts printed with line drawings of the statue and the device used to turn it. Although it cost only $400 to rotate the statue the first time, the cost of turning it back was $2,081. Dyson and the other pranksters also had to pay $1,466 in other repair costs.

The university has now installed four lug bolts at the corners of the statue to prevent other students from moving it again.

Central Kitchens And the Food Plan Debate

No issue seems as dear to the hearts of Rice students as their food. Our biggest protest this year occurred when Food and Housing tried to charge an extra dollar for shrimp.

Only 45 people dined in the colleges that night.

This year's food plan, although great in the flexibility it allowed students, didn't work out so well for F&H, who lost $16,000 first semester. After various proposals involving unrefundable food plans and the removal of the card reader from Sammy's, a compromise was reached which includes a higher base cost and food a la carte, but also allows students the Sammy's option and refunds on a certain portion of the money.

Robert Irwin — Scrims As Art

The arrival of visiting art and art history professor Robert Irwin kicked off another debate on that age old question, "What is Art?" Irwin installed scrims in spaces around campus, and after the originals were vandalized, students and professors wrote letters to the Thresher about the aesthetic value of the constructions. Irwin's attitude is more neutral. After the completion of a project, he gives it to the people to do with as they please. Our scrims, however, were not the originals by Irwin, a former performance art teacher, and merely installed to publicize his architectural lecture series.

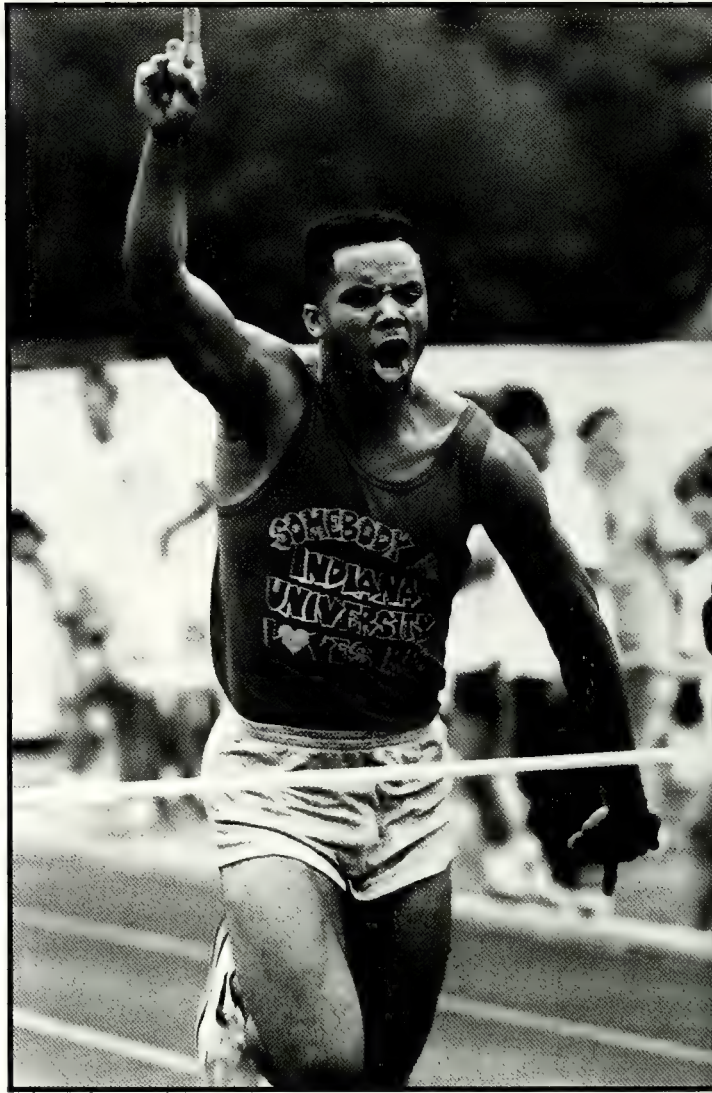

Concern for Women's Issues

Last year, the university established the Commission on Women, chaired by Hallie Poindexter, to research possible gender inequities and to discover means to correct them. Some of the projects the committee worked on this year include attempts to improve working conditions and a sexual harassment survey. Students also displayed their interest in these issues by forming a women's group unofficially called Rice Women's Alliance, open to all members of the Rice community. The group will apply to the SA for recognition in the fall. Finally, Jane Chance filed what she hopes will become a class action suit against Rice, alleging that the university is in violation of the Equal Pay Act.

Cathy Clack named director of Minority Affairs

In the fall, the decision was made to create a new Minority Affairs Office. The administration had originally been reluctant to pursue the idea. The SA endorsed the office, and after Jones sophomore David Russell vehemently protested the new office as discrimination against "anglo-saxon males", a forum was held at Baker, at which many people strongly voiced their support. With the input of many different campus groups, Vice President for Undergraduate Affairs Ronald Stebbings instituted plans for the office, and on June 1, former Associate Admissions Director Cathy Clack assumed the position of Director of Minority Affairs.

Owls finish season 31-28

Critical injuries throughout the 1988 baseball season, starting with top catcher Ricky Strebeck's broken kneecap, crushed Rice's hope for a great season.

A real blow came halfway through the season when pitcher-outfielder and key hitter Steve Ramhart stepped hard on an opposing player's foot in a mad dash for base and crushed his ankle. Coach David Hall said, "He was the best all-around player on the team. He was best in hitting, best in fielding, and he was pitching well." With 73 at bats his average was .411, and he had scored 36 runs. His record was 2-0, with no earned runs. He also had a field percentage of .943. Before his injury, the team's record was 18-4.

Rice finished the season with a record of 31-28, which is a little better than the last year, but not nearly as good as they had counted on. Coach Hall commented, "We just did not play good defense." No matter how strong our offense, Rice just couldn't win ball games with the opponents scoring almost every inning.

Rice had one all-Southwest Conference player in '88, and of course that was outfielder Jay Knoblauch, the man who dominates the Rice record books. His fourth season this year placed him at the top of five more career categories, including most runs, hits, and RBIs. He already owned the most career homeruns after only three years of college play. He has now signed on for the Yankees. The loss of Knoblauch will be a big drawback for Rice in the 1989 season.

The high point of the season was probably the win over 4th ranked Texas on April 9. The Owl team beat out the Longhorns 6-4 at Cameron Field. Rice did win six of twelve conference games, no small feat considering the opposition. Arkansas, Texas A&M, and Texas all finished in the top 25 in the nation. Rice defeated Baylor on their own turf May 26 and then took two out of three games from TCU. The only SWC teams the Owls didn't have at least one victory against were A&M and Arkansas.

The team's worst showings came in the last half of the season, when Texas pulled off a 15-2 game, and the University of Houston won a doubleheader 14-3 and 17-2. Rice lost their last six games of the season against Oral Roberts and Arkansas.

Besides an admittedly "lousy defense" toward the latter part of the season, Coach Hall attributes the year's results to a thinness in the team's lineup due to young pitchers and the loss of Ramharther and Strebeck. "We had a completely new pitching staff . . . and our key team leaders weren't there. The batting lineup can't have those kinds of holes. Those spots are too hard to fill." With that power gone, Rice lost any edge it may have had.

Rice had conference leaders in several categories, and even one first place leader. Ben Mathews, who was all-SWC in '87, stole more bases this year than anyone else in the conference, 33 in all, enough to give him the Rice career record. Also, Jay Knoblauch was fifth in the SWC in most runs, sixth in RBIs, and fourth in doubles. Tim Vannaman was all-district and had 12 home runs, placing him ninth in the SWC and right behind Knoblauch in the Rice books for a season.

Rice again managed to get into the top 25 during the season, which it has done every year since '84, when the club finished 19th on the season. The Owls ranked 22nd in March, winning 21 of their first 25 games.

Hall says, "There is a good strength about the club. It has a strong nucleus of good players." Hopefully the return of Steve Ramharther and the experience gained this year by the young pitchers such as sophomores John Polasek (8-3 win-loss record as of May 8) and Mike Cooper, and freshmen Rob Howard and Chris Jones will make the '88 season a stepping stone to more years like '84.

The Rice women's basketball team opened the season in a strong position, despite the loss of three seniors: Holly Jones, Dede Brantley, and Angie Phea. Jones had been Rice's leading scorer for the previous two years, and this, her fifth year, she took on an advisory role as a student assistant coach.

Rice had two returning starters (Edith Adams and Karen Sowada) and overall eight returning lettermen (Adams, Sowada, Glenda Jensen, Amelia Cooper, Shannon Keeley, Laura Bennett, Leslie Tassin, and Robin Castell). They had had seven conference wins in the 86-87 season, and tenth year head coach Linda Tucker hoped to better that record. Helping to further boost the lady Owls' chances were the five strong freshman recruits (Molly Morrison, Jane Roman, Charity Shira, Andrea Prater, and Casey Zeh), all of whom were very eager to play.

The women as well as the men's basketball team made a real effort to attract a bigger audience with special half-time entertainment such as paper airplane throwing and team basketball dribbling. The crowd of 500, although small, was ardent in their support.

Unfortunately, Rice did not live up to its pre-season expectations. The women Hoopsters finished up the season with an 11-14 overall record and only 5-11 in the Southwest Conference.

However, despite its losing record, Rice women's basketball discovered some real talent and its ability to play a multi-dimensional game, which had not before been the case. The three-point shot was instituted the previous season, and Sowada, Tassin, and Jensen all had ranked in the top five in three-point percentage in the Southwest Conference. This year Karen Sowada and Glenda Jensen led the team in three-point percentages, both shooting a whopping 40% (third and fourth in the SWC). Leslie Tassin and Jane Roman also contributed to the "Mad Bomber" squad, which enabled Rice to be ranked third in the nation in three-point conversions. Those 123 buckets (more than three times as many as their opponents) also helped keep the Lady Owls close in games which would have otherwise been blowouts.

In addition, Rice's inside game really heated up, led by Edith Adams and junior Amelia Cooper. Cooper had been sidelined in the 85-86 season (her freshman year of eligibility) with knee injuries, and had worked hard to build up her strength. She led the team in rebounding, grabbing 8.6 caroms per game, and scored 20 or more points in three consecutive games at one point. She was named Southwest Conference Player of the Week on January 10 for her strong performances against TCU and SMU. She scored 36 points and hustled for 34 rebounds in those two games. Adams really came into her own this year, as she led the team in scoring and was second in rebounds, with 12.6 points and 8.4 rebounds per contest. Said coach Tucker "I think Edith had a great year. She assumed a leadership role and enjoyed herself playing." For her efforts, Adams was named to the All-SWC second team and the academic All-SWC first team.

Yet another dimension of the Rice team that came forth for the first time in a while was the depth of the bench. Owing to a more-evenly distributed amount of talent, Tucker was able to substitute more freely than ever before. At the guard position Charity Shira came on strong at the end of the season, starting the last ten games and scoring 7.1 points per game and leading the team with 3 assists per game for those ten games. Sophomore Leslie Tassin was the vital sixth-man and made a number of sparkling defensive plays in addition to her mad bombing contribution of 21 three-pointers. Filling in effectively at the post and forward positions were Laura Bennett and Robin Castell.

Rice combined the aforementioned dimensions to put together an eleven-win season, five of which came in the tough Southwest Conference. The 3-1 Owl start was the best ever in their SWC conference schedule and was highlighted by wins against Texas Tech (68-67), Texas Christian (86-79), and Southern Methodist (82-77). At that point, the Owls had already made 72 three pointers, with more than half the game remaining, and Adams scored a career high (24) against TCU.

The Owls then hit a tough stretch in the middle of the SWC conference schedule, when they lost seven straight games. Led by Adams' career high 25 points against SMU in the second half of the SWC schedule, Rice snapped the losing skid and won two of its last five games.

Despite not equalling last year's record (7-9 in the SWC), coach Tucker was pleased with the team effort. "I think we did a lot better than people expected. We lost a lot of close games. If we'd had a few breaks, we could have surpassed several conference wins easily." However, she warned that "Basketball is such a mental game. When everybody learns to push themselves for the entire game, we'll be a better team. We just have to realize that concentration is as important as any physical fundamental we will work on."

Tucker hopes that, with a conference season under its belt, the younger Owls will combine with the older players to form more of a coherent unit. "Knowing what it takes individually — it's that little edge that you may not have right now, but will be there next season — is important to win games in the Southwest Conference," Tucker said. "That's what I've hoped the younger players have gained this year."

New Coach Thompson leads Owls to a disappointing 6-21

b y W a d e C h o w

Scott Thompson, in his first season with the Owls, brought to Autry Court a new sense of confidence. Attendance and spirit were improved as Coach Thompson's energy, optimism, and enthusiasm proved contagious to the student body as well as his players. The season yielded more losses than anyone liked, with a 6-21 overall record and a 3-13 SWC season. Win or lose though, the Owls were never boring. Always willing to go for the big play, the Owls finished in the top ten nationally in attempted 3-point shots. In every game, they hustled and scrapped and challenged their opponents at both ends of the court; they demanded the respect of the Southwest Conference.

As with all transition years, the 1987-88 season was a rocky one. The Owls' inconsistency cost them dearly against Lamar, Mississippi State and even the lowly Akron Zips when they crumbled after having leads at the half. At times, too, the ball just refused to bounce the Owls' way. There was the one-point loss to US International. And against A&M, the possibility for a major upset was dashed in the final seconds by a frustrating turnover.

Their victories afforded glimpses of the Owls' true potential. In those moments when the Owls could put it all together, they seemed capable of beating anyone in the Southwest Conference. Sometimes lucky and sometimes well-earned, these victories gave the fans a slew of highlights. At home, there was the solid demolition of TCU at home. And on the road, a miraculous shot from three-quarters court gave the Owls a stunning last-second victory over Missouri-Kansas City. Against Texas, a slam-bam-reverse jam by David Willie off an offensive rebound broke the Horns' comeback hopes. The Owls managed also to stave off Tech at home, slipping away with a two point victory.

Fulfilling the promise he had shown as a freshman, D'Wayne Tanner emerged as the leader of the Owls. In the starting point-guard spot, Tanner displayed both poise and ability in guiding the Owls. For the second straight year, he led the team in assists and steals. He became only the third Owl in history to record a "triple-triple" with 233 points, 111 rebounds and 128 assists on the year. His irrepressible presence on the floor gave the Owls an anchor even when things became chaotic.

Stepping right into stardom was a confident freshman named David Willie. His impact was felt immediately at Autry and reverberated through the conference. Given the green light by Thompson, Willie dazzled Autry Court with his rim-bending dunks and his silky 3-point shot from deep in the corner. As the first rookie to lead Rice in scoring since 1976, Willie poured in 15.4 points per game, reaching double figures in 23 out of 27 games. Voted onto the AP all-newcomer team, David Willie set conference records in 3-point shots made in a game (7) and in a season (80).

Smaller but quicker than most of the defenders trying to cover him, 6-8 center Andy Gilchrist complemented Willie's outside threat with his cunning post moves which left his defenders flat-footed or faked out of their jocks. As the team's third leading scorer and second leading rebounder, Gilchrist contributed at both ends of the court. 6-7 forward Richard Holmes, however, had the rough task of covering such 7-foot behemoths like Jose Nassar and Darryl Middleton. But his tenacity and toughness earned him a starting spot, and as his ability to shoot improved over the season, he should be a strong starter next year as well.

Junior Ron Robertson might best be remembered this season for dunking over the TCU Horned Frogs. In both games against the Frogs, Robertson jumped over a TCU defender and dunked on his head. A tremendously gifted athlete, Robertson often managed to poke the ball away on defense and drive to the hole on offense. He led the Owls in rebounding. Senior Mike Girardi will be sorely missed. Coming off the bench, Girardi provided the spark when the Owls' spirits were flagging. He will be sorely missed next year.

The strength of the bench played a key role in the Owls' season. Coach Thompson instituted a fierce press which demanded a great deal from the players and required constant substitutions. Senior Michael Irving spelled Tanner at the point and proved his ability to hit the 3-point shot. 6'10 freshman Chip Scott came on strong defensively as the season progressed and earned greater and greater amounts of playing time. Senior Carl Daniels also gained increased playing time at the forward position because of his quickness and hustle. And though Glenn Youngkin, Kevin Ruffcorn, and the injured Dave Mlachnik did not see that much playing time, they were always ready for the call, always thinking as team players.

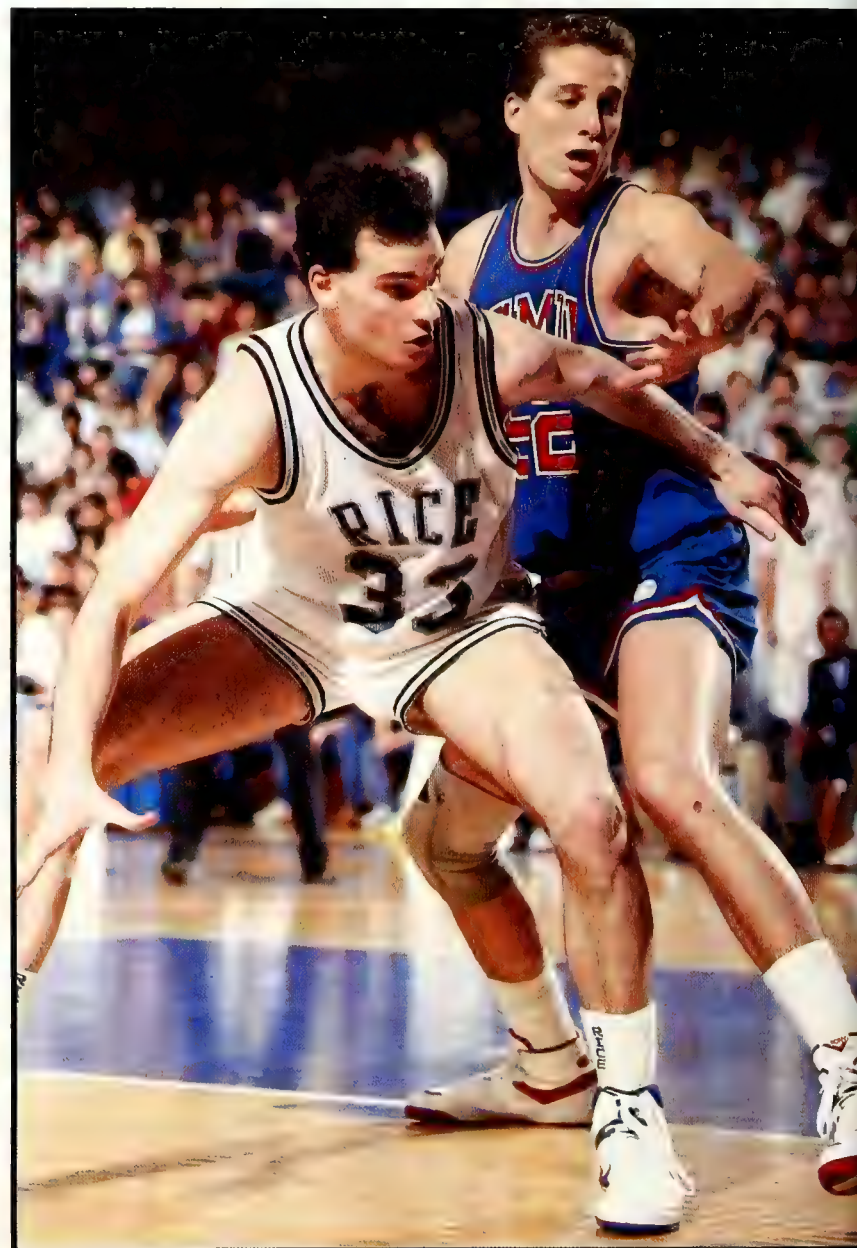

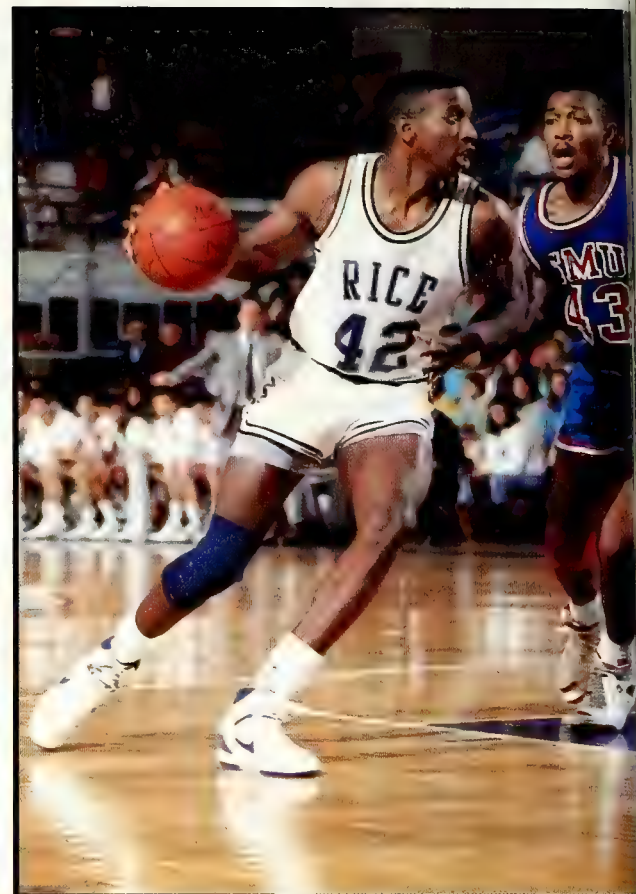

Graduating only 3 seniors, Carl Daniels, Mike Girardi, and Michael Irving, Rice is losing no starters. Furthermore, Rice's returning players account for 84% of this year's offensive output (1,565 of the 1,866 points scored) and 87.5% of the rebounding production (865 of 989). Put together with the promising new recruits, the Owls hope to shine next season.

Senior Carl Daniels got a chance to show his talent this season.

Freshman forward David Willie provided moments of electrifying excitement, brightening up some "Autry Court from Hell" evenings.

Owls center Andy Gilchrist fought hard all season against the big men of the conference.

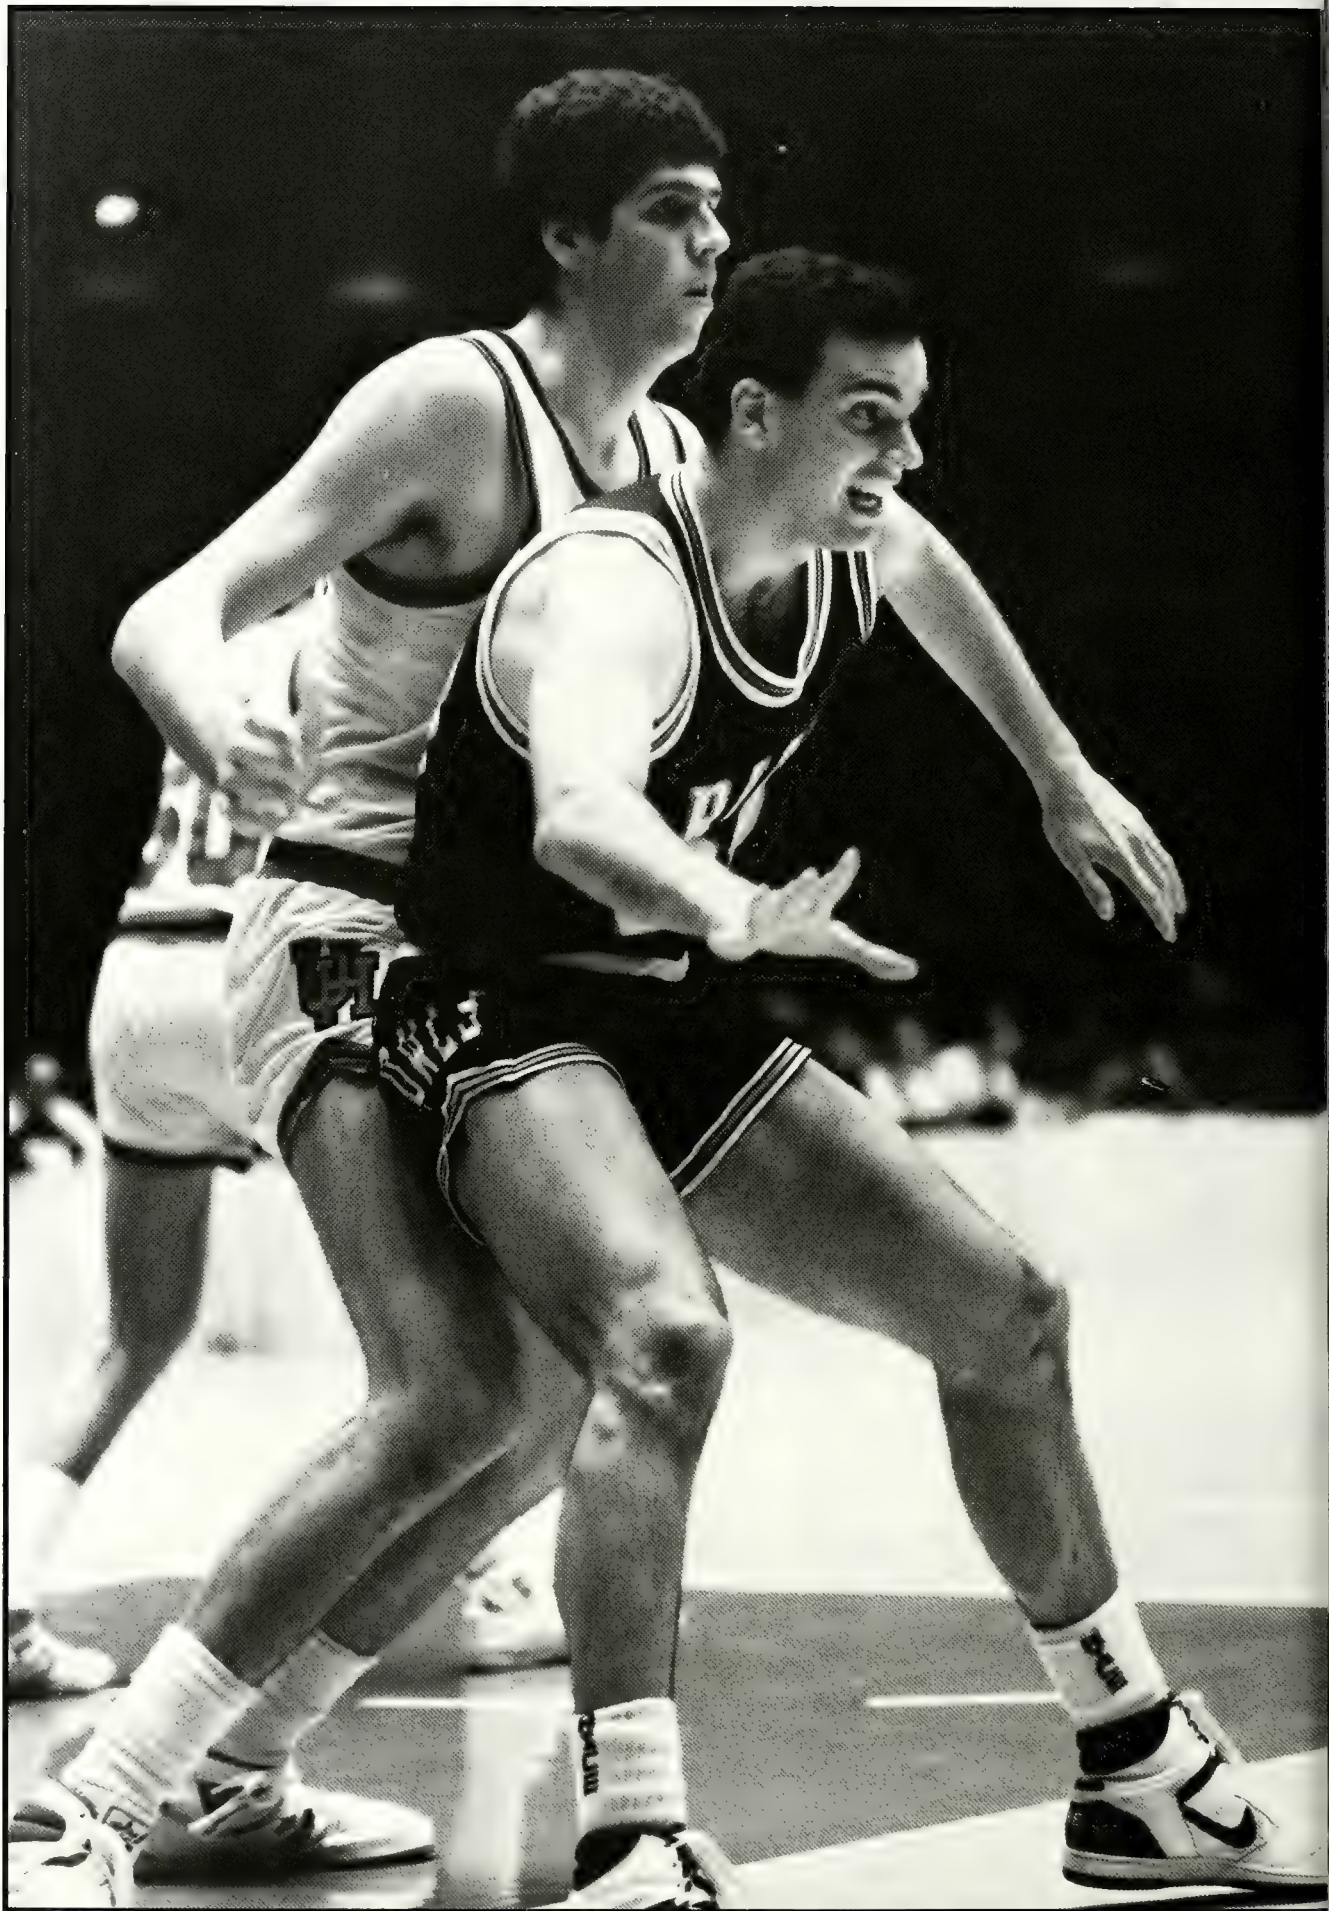

“We’ve improved our defense tremendously since the season started. We’re still not great, but we used to be terrible.”

1987 Season Ends in Disappointment

By some standards the 1987 Rice Owls were a successful football team. The '87 Owls amassed the second best offensive yardage total in the history of the school, which placed them third overall in the Southwest Conference in number of first downs and total offensive plays.

Unfortunately, the 1987 Rice Owls don't care to measure their success by how many first downs they earned, how many plays they ran, or how many points they scored. They measure their success by how many games they won, and in that light the 1987 season was a disappointing one for the Rice football players and coaches.

The Owls, led by second-year head coach Jerry Berndt, finished the season with a 2-9 record and winless in the Southwest Conference. Rice opened up the season with a 34-30 win over Lamar, and added a 38-28 victory over Southwest Texas State on the fourth week of the season. Rice's other nine games ranged from the heartbreaking to the humiliating, and every degree in between. The Owls were blown out 59-7 by Texas Tech, and just fell short in their come-from-behind bid against Baylor, falling 34-31.

Some new faces on the schedule this year were Indiana and Louisiana State. Playing the Hoosiers for the first time ever the Owls fell 35-13 in Bloomington a game in which the Owls hit season lows in first downs, total offensive plays and total yardage. And with the open spot on the calendar caused by Southern Methodist's demise, Rice renewed an old rivalry with LSU. And Rice did it in Death Valley. And Rice did it without its top four linebackers. And Rice lost 49-16.

Despite the disappointment that went along with the season, the Owls were able to find several reasons to smile in '87. "We didn't have many positive things this year," said head coach Jerry Berndt, "but one positive was our offense. We had the third best offense in the conference. And we had the second best offensive output in the history of this school."

That much is undeniable: Rice moved the ball very well in '87. The 4235 total yards are second only to the 4272 gained by the 1976 Tommy Kramer-led squad. And the offense was certainly not one-dimensional, as those 4235 yards break down into 2117 yards rushing and 2118 yards passing, a balance many football coaches are only able to dream about.

The offense was led for most of the season by junior quarterback Quentis Roper, a guy who is just as much at home

Maegle averaged 7.3 in 1953.

However, despite the bright play of Todd Jones and Lorenzo Cyphers, Rice just couldn't seem to win. "I don't know whether this football team this year was snakebit or what," said Berndt. "We just couldn't come up with the right formula to win a football game."

Undoubtedly, part of the problem stemmed from the number of injuries, especially on the defense. Linebacker Jeff Hood was the only defensive player to start all 11 games for Rice, and the only two other defensive players to start as many as nine games, Donald Bowers and Nigel Codrington, got their chances only after injuries sidelined a projected starter.

All this injury added up to a less-than-stellar defensive showing for the Owls. Rice finished the season last in total defense, last in scoring defense, and last in the final Southwest Conference standings. The best Rice defensive performance of the year was against lowly Southwest Texas State, and the Bobcats were still able to score 28 points against the Owls. thirteen seniors played their last games as Owls in 1987 And therein lies another part of the problem for Rice's poor showing this year; lack of experience. This fact didn't seem to bother Berndt very much, but it was certainly a factor "I wasn't concerned about how young we are because I knew we'd get experience," said Berndt. Hopefully, all this experience will help us next dropping back into the pocket to pass as he is running the option. Roper started the first eight games before a sore shoulder hampered his ability to pass and forced him to stick to returning kickoffs. In stepped senior Mark Comalander for the final three games, capping his career at Rice third on the Rice all-time lists for total passing yards and touchdown passes.

Another bright spot offensively for Rice was the play of senior tailback Todd Jones. Todd gained 582 yards on only 82 carries for the year, and that 7.1 yards-per-rush average is the best since the great Dicky

Although the Owls fell a little bit short of Berndt's pre-season prediction of five, and quite possibly six, wins, there were moments to be savored during the year. And if nothing else the Rice Owls proved that they never go down without a fight.

For one brief week, at least, the Owls were undefeated. Rice opened up the season by beating Lamar 34-30. Having never before lost to the Cardinals in three previous games, the Owls were in danger of tarnishing their spotless record as they trailed 24-13 at the end of the third quarter, and were still behind 30-27 with only five minutes left to play. But a late-game, 69-yard drive gave Rice the lead, as Quentis Roper went in for the touchdown with only fifteen seconds left on the clock for the game, fullback Lorenzo Cyphers carried the ball 33 times for 159 yards, the best statistics by an Owl rusher for the year.

After the losses to Indiana and LSU, the Owls returned to Rice Stadium to settle an old score with the Southwest Texas State Bobcats, who had embarrassed Rice the year before in a 31-6 pasting of the Owls. But this year was different. Oh, it looked the same. Again the Bobcats came into the game with a sizzling 0-3 record, and again they jumped out to an early lead, and again they were not as talented as the Rice team they faced. This year they got caught. Rice fought back to take a 38-28 decision from Southwest Texas State. There were plenty of highs and lows in this game, ranging from the abysmal 8.3 yards-per-punt average and two botched field goal attempts that Rice suffered, to defensive back William McClay's three interceptions and one fumble recovery and tailback Todd Jones' 141 yards rushing on 15 carries, including a 56-yard run that proved to be Rice's longest of the year.

After showing the Bobcats who the better team was, Rice headed into the Southwest Conference portion of its schedule, opening with Texas. The last time Rice beat UT was back in 1965, and this year was no exception. The offense scored 26 points, and the defense, according to Berndt, "Played well for 60 plays." Unfortunately the Owls lined up defensively 67 times, and those 7 extra plays accounted for 35 points, and enabled the Longhorns to pull out a 45-26 victory.

Rice's best chance at a Southwest Conference win in 1987 came against Texas Christian when the defense put out its best performance of the year in holding the Horned Frogs to 30 points. But five Rice turnovers were the Owls' downfall, as TCU prevailed 30-16.

And then came A&M. The Aggies, eventual champions of the SWC, were facing a Rice team that had been humiliated by Texas Tech the week before to the tune of 59-7. The Aggies, however, had their own ideas of how to spend that Saturday afternoon, and being beaten by Rice didn't figure into those plans. After only four offensive plays A&M had 14 points and a whopping 149 yards rushing, and from there it was off to the races as the Aggies bettered the determined but out-manned Owls 34-21.

The season came to a close as the University of Houston took back the fabled Bayou Bucket with a resounding 45-21 win that included over 1000 yards of combined offense, several fights, and four hours and five minutes of elapsed time. The run-and-shoot offense of Cougar High proved to be too much for Rice, as Houston quarterback David Dacus nearly rewrote the SWC record book with a 38 of 58 passing day for 450 yards.

So the season ended with another loss, and the Owls were sent back to the drawing board, hoping to find something in this season of disappointments to build on for next year. "I believe in where we're going," said Berndt after the season had ended. "I believe in what we're doing. We know, our players know, and I think most of the people in the conference know that we're close to making it happen."

it's a pretty win."*

— head coach Jerry Berndt, on Rice's defeat
of SW Texas State, 38-28.

Right
Senior quarterback Mark Comalander finished his career by breaking into the Rice record books.

Below
Junior quarterback Quentis Roper was often the spark in Rice's offense, both on the ground and in the air.

Lamar	34-30
Indiana	13-35
LSU	16-49
SW Texas	38-28
Texas	26-45
TCU	16-30
Texas Tech	7-59
Texas A&M	21-34
Arkansas	14-38
Baylor	31-34
Houston	21-45

Quentis Roper, Russell Moses, and Dan Maberry get together with Sammy to build up intensity.

Coach Jerry Berndt faced disappointment again in his second season. His pregame handshake with every player was an important part of the football ritual.

Steve Zdatny learned what he had REALLY gotten himself into as R.A. . . . everyone did his and her best to Americanize Andre . . . and then there were the freshmen: sweet, innocent, and unsuspecting . . . but not for long

Hanszen women focused their energies elsewhere . . . and went on to dominate not only in soccer and powderpuff, but also tennis and softball . . . we came face to face with death on college night . . . the freshmen finally learned to keep their clothes on . . . we made the other colleges eat hay at Beer-Bike . . . we boycotted shrimp dinner . . . and we still managed to (barely) survive room draw and (oh yeah) classes . . . Hanszen Women Rule Hanszen spectators held their breaths as they waited for the goalie, Tracy Sharp, to stand up at the end of the shootout. Did she stop the last shot? Had Hanszen defeated Jones' fat women for the soccer championship? Fans were relieved and thrilled when Tracy revealed the ball held securely behind her back. The 1987 Hanszen women's soccer team overcame the odds emerging from the loser's bracket to win it all. After losing their first game to Jones, Hanszen, led by the high-scorer Juliellen Thompson and goalies, Tracy Sharp and Kathy Werner, managed to defeat Jones not only in their second meeting, but in their third as well. All of the team members contributed greatly to Hanszen's success, both returning players and freshmen. Especially notable were the efforts of Kris Rogers, Lauren Gass, Mary Bittle Teer and Kathy Reed. In addition to all this talent, the team was aided by the superb coaching of Steve Mattox, Kelly Miller, and the soon to be deported El Salvadoran, Rafael Barraza.

The success of Hanszen's women did not end on the soccer field. As the powderpuff season began, the energy and effort was focused on a new sport to dominate in. Here, Hanszen not only equalled their soccer success, but actually surpassed it. With six wins and one tie, Hanszen ended the season undefeated. Brady Bartosh coached the talented offense with quarterback Dianne South controlling the field. Sarah Monarchi, Julieellen Thompson, and Diane Bieber all contributed greatly to each Hanszen success. Dan Goldman maximized on the female blocking talent, and Ken Soh and Lucky Sahualla, the other manly coaches, worked together to produce a defense which allowed only 15 points during the whole season. Linebacker "Spud" Pendergraf captained the defense with strong support from Mandy "Sack" Gilbert. With its final victory over Wiess, Hanszen women celebrated with their traditional party of "Milk and Cookies." The fall semester of 1987 will be well and long remembered in the history of Hanszen women's sports.

Men's chug captain Bill Jones, cheers on Kristina Velasquez "Ohmigosh, will she do it? YES!!!"

Beer-Bike . . . Hee Haw Hanszen was the theme, complete with hayride and country music. After pelting every college that passed by with hay, Hanszen made its stunning entrance as the LAST college to arrive at the track. We jammed . . . we sang . . . we Cheered . . . we dreamed of wasting away in Margaritaville . . . but first things first . . . THE RACE. After months of practice and training, we were ready. The freshmen really contributed a lot. Mary Bittle Teer, Steph Green, and Dave Crawford were lightning fast on the track, while Beth Erlanson and Richie Ehlers chugged dry and fast. The women's team was awesome, armed with the experienced talent of Tracy Sharp, Mari Ochiai, Julie Wroble, Janelle Queng, and Kristina Velasquez. They finished a painfully close second behind . . . well we won't name them. Although the men's team had lost a number of good men, they still had the experience of Mike Doyle, Carl Gooch, Kelly Miller, and Mr. Beer-Bike himself, Bill Jones. What the men's team lacked in experience, they made up for with talent, and they gave it their all. Of course, we never could have done it without our pit crew (affectionately called Team Grab Ass) led by Mike Madden and Tom Linneman. When all was said and done, though, it was a good race, but it was time to party . . . no more training for now but watch out Will Rice we'll be even better next year!

Julie Wroble concentrates on her last lap.

As I am forced to "grow up," I will never forget that:

- Saleem _____, etc.... All the wild times and other miscellaneous bullshit will be omitted to protect the guilty. (see "OUR HOUSE")... & "IT AIN'T EASY...."

- Ted likes sweet potatoes, ...and is rumored to be a "Dan" these days... (P)
- Mitch did it in 4 chips; we did it in 4 years -- I still can't decide which impressed me the most.
- Jay can't hold his booze when a "splash" of humor comes along.
- Steve never learned to rap or moonwalk... but later turned into a "Dan." (a dessert...)
- Mishka's "straight-of-hand" can turn her fruit salad into her stomach, my swordfish onto her plate, and the check you guessed it!
- THE SMITHS were the best! (Thanks); & that Glenda smiles lots more than Mrs. T!

- in my "far-too-little time" at Oxford I accumulated more wonderful memories than I could have hoped for... even acquired a taste for bitter! (b. CLEI)
- I was an EE major for longer than I was a varsity tennis player, but now I'm an Economics major so, assume that the world was composed of EE's & tennis players....

On my honor, while at Rice I've received a great deal of aid, friendship and love from a great many people: all my grandparents who's support has helped more than they will ever know, my family who will hopefully see Rice some day, all of the faculty members who weren't too busy to help, and, of course, all of the friends I've found along the way.

There are numerous things for me to remember about Rice; however, I believe the following two quotations fairly sum up what I have learned during my three year tenure in Houston

"Training is everything. The peach was once a bitter almond; cauliflower is nothing but cabbage with a college education." Mark Twain

"Our colleges ought to have lit up in us a lasting relish for the better kind of man, a loss of appetite for mediocrities." William James Best wishes for all. Michael L. White

1. On the warpath: Colin Delany, Conrad Reinford, and Micheal Birch.

2. Wiess Freshmen chant: "TEAM WIESS"

3. The freshmen scatter

4. Melissa Snyder and Maureen Scholes watch Johnathan Su and co-fellow Laura Dresser fight it out.

THIRD FLOOR DROP

Wiessmen are made, not born. Our freshmen are trained early and often. Their training assumes many forms: yelling "Team Wiess!", being awakened every morning by the Bon Jovi Picture Disc, and learning necessary survival techniques. Here we see Lesson #17: "How to defend oneself against Houston humidity."

After passing the wetness test, the freshmen demonstrated Wiess' mobile capabilities by subjecting the rest of campus to the test. They established a beachhead at every college and unleashed the firepower of the new, flame-retardant trash cans. Freshmen en route to the activities Fair were given a choice: to submit peaceably or to be hunted down and doused like wild animals. The final enemy stronghold to fall was Rupp's Pool; amphibious units secured the compound with no resistance.

The freshmen performed honorably and well. They proved that they have the knowledge, the skill, the tactics, and the will necessary to survive four years (or more) at Wiess College.

1. A little wet . . .

2. Very wet . . .

3. Robert Bartsch and Colin Campbell refilling their trash cans.

4. Jay Williams, Brian Sweeney, Linda Bellama, Gordon Spielberg, and Robert Bartsch stalking their next victims.

A STRONG WIESS

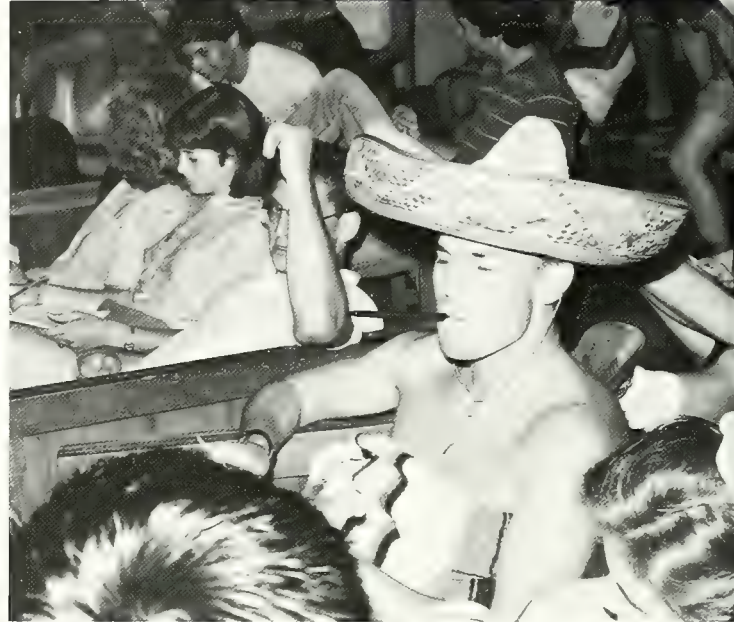

The Wiess Cabinet works diligently to uphold the integrity and the liberties of the college. Meeting every other Wednesday in the Outer Commons, the members debate burning issues like the Treasurer's Report, the size of the Defense Budget, and the best ways to harass the Freshman Reps.

The Cabinet's job isn't easy; often it must make tough decisions and back them up with swift action. Take, for example, freshmen who haven't learned that only cabinet members may vote at meetings. (see picture). A ubangee isn't something the cabinet members enjoy ... it's their duty.

The Cabinet is trained to deal with crisis situations. When subversive elements inside the Thresher challenged Wiess's honor over the University Court Chairman election, the Cabinet sent a clear signal by promptly appointing the College Elections Chairman, David Krulak, to the position of Defense Minister. There was also a thresher-burning party in the Acabowl.

Another crisis to which the leadership of the college was forced to respond was the Lovett-Will Rice war. Members of the cabinet quickly issued the Wiess Doctrine, which declared that Wiess College would neither support either combatant nor tolerate hostile maneuvers in Wiess's sphere of influence, which includes Hanszen.

In both domestic affairs and foreign policy, the Wiess Cabinet serves the college and takes the necessary steps to keep Wiess standing tall.

WIESS MASTER AND ASSOCIATES

Wiess had a successful year with its Master and Associates program. Wiess began the year with eight new associates and an external vice president, Chien-Wen Tseng, with much determination and enthusiasm to incorporate them into as many Wiess activities as possible. Our master, Dr. Joan Rea (right) from the Department of Spanish and Portuguese, was active in Wiess Tabletop and enjoyed concocting exotic dishes for student gatherings and Wiess activities.

Unfortunately, Wiess lost one of its Resident Associates, Lynn Greibling, close to the end of first semester, but luckily acquired Dr. John Bennett (bottom right) as a temporary Resident Associate during second semester. Dr. Stan Dodds (bottom left), as always, was of invaluable help in organizing barbecues and building sets for Wiess Tabletop. He was also one of the instructors for Wiess 201 — From the Beginning: The Universe, Earth and Life.

Dr. Bill was constantly around Wiess this year, lending a helping hand everywhere possible or capturing Wiess on film. One of our new associates, Dr. Joan Strassman (below), among other activities, took a group of students out to Brazos Bend for an interesting talk about some of her favorite subjects, including bees. (Right) Lynn Greibling, Brian Tagtmeier and Laura McDeavitt.

P.S. Thanks Mom!

The past 4 years have had their bad times, but they've been incredibly good overall. There are so many moments that I will treasure, unfortunately they are only memories, never to be experienced again. Nonetheless, I will hold tight to them, regressing on them frequently, when I need to be reminded how much Christ has blessed me. To the people, my friends and family, who have left their mark on me and made my stay here so wonderfully good, I thank you and will never forget you: Allen E., Dan H., Robert M., Kevin C., Jimmy R., T. J. Bath, Dan O., Merri M., Nancy J., Darrick W., Dr. Dale Spence, Amy M., Clinton W., Diana C., Chris Y., but most of all my roommate, David Gano, who put up with me for 4 years. David: I will cherish our friendship forever, the only regret I have is that I had to spend so much time training I missed a lot of fun times with you, I only wish we had another 4 years, these went so fast. To my brother, Jim, I hope Rice gives you the same great experiences it gave me. Owen "Spike" Dry B.A., L.A.T., M-1

The Days of the Swollen Brain

The days of the swollen brain
began later in life
She carried around this great tool and carried with it paper, for texture.

Its creations spilling out like polished stones when she spoke tumbling around otherwise some huge bingo ball chamber . . .

She thought how the noise resembled squeaking sneakers and caught herself twisting steps ever so slightly on laminated floors.

She made circles similarly, twirling chalk on the board in between studying.

Dogs make circles before they sleep and when she slept she cradled the swollen brain in the curve of her arm pillow softening its churning.

In the stones you saw reflections of where she came from and her friend, Sarah, but mostly there were trees, dim shadows cast like Rothkos dark.

You knew then how in her dreams that cradled head mixed hues and shadows coated to protect, and the trees were alive there
like the stones,
wanting the complexity of granite.

THE MARY GIBBS JONES COLLEGE OF THE RICE INSTITUTE
HOUSTON TEXAS

LLOYD & MORGAN-A. I.

DORMITORY No. 1

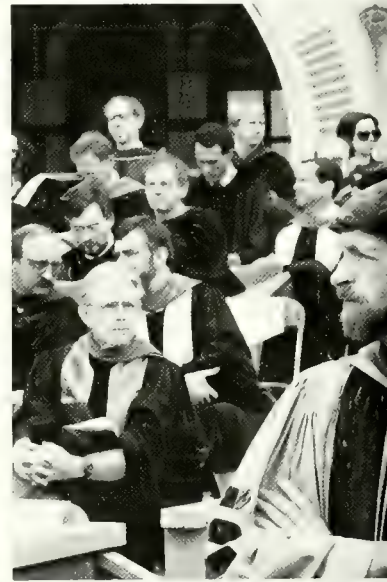

SCALE:

NEW MASTERS FOR 1988-89 . . .

Priscilla Huston and Sam Davis,
the new Masters of Jones.

The new school year promises to be at least as exciting as the last. With a Beer-Bike and three consecutive College Track Meet championships under our belts, Jones looks forward to again proving we have the hardest women and the fastest men (or is it the other way around?) Plus the Birthday Bash and Fun Run will now be combined as part of a yearly all-school festival day! But 1988-89 also brings some changes. RAs Dwight Andrews and Eric Evans have moved up to bigger and better things. Ken and Laura Bickers and Chris Newfield are our new RAs. Dr. Isle is going to take a year off from Rice to pursue some personal interests and Sam Davis, Professor of Chemical Engineering, and Priscilla Huston, Director of ICSCA, are our new masters.

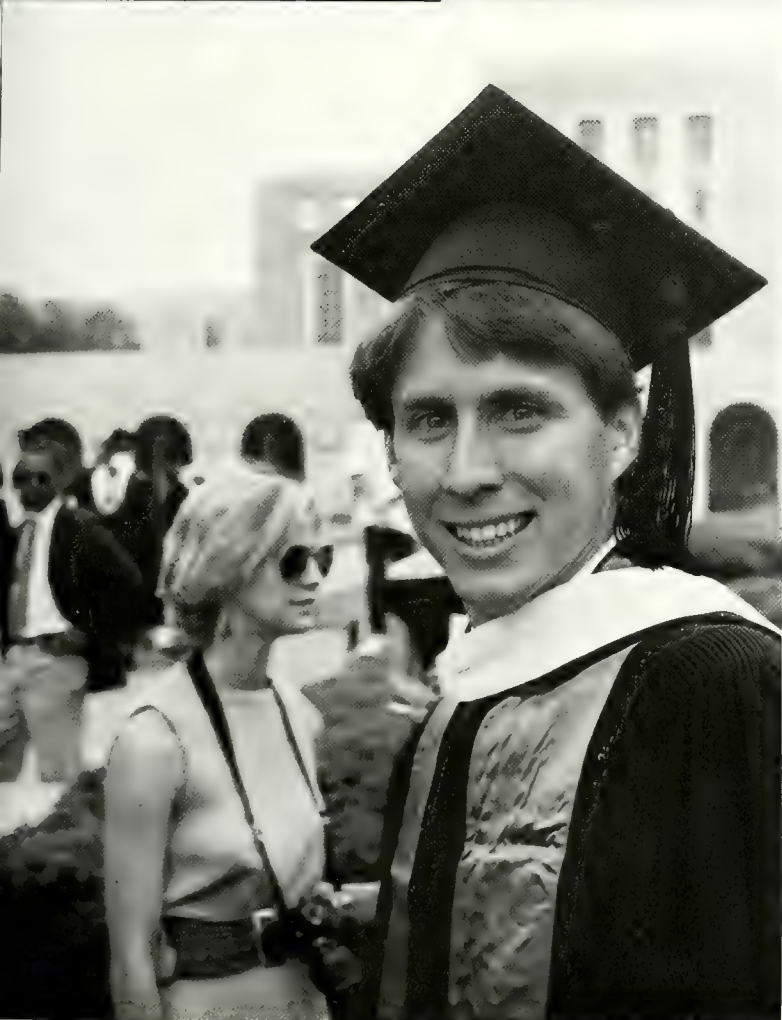

Now I think we all know who this Isle guy is. He's the one who for the past few years has lived in that nice house behind the commons. And he seems to pop up in a lot of those group and team pictures (like Powderpuff and Beer-Bike, for example) all the time. You've probably even seen him at lunch or dinner. In the latter case the head waiter most likely came to you and asked you if you would "Please save a place for Dr. Isle." And when he showed up you noticed that he didn't have to have his ID run through. He just got a plate, no questions asked! Well he was not just a hang around, a dude scamming free meals and a rent free home, or a man desperate to have his picture taken. He was your Master (and mine too). Dr. Isle supported and helped out with all Jones' events. In sports he was our biggest fan. He was there when you needed advice and when you needed a letter of recommendation (and he never charged you a penny for either). He was a friend. What more can you ask of a Master? Dr. Isle is taking a one year leave of absence and then coming back as Master of Jones in 1989-90 (and beyond), so he's still sort of our Master. We asked him back for a few more years and he accepted. A sure sign of mutual liking.

Each of my years at Rice I have gotten to know Dr. Isle a little better. At first I was afraid to take his picture. I used to crouch down behind people, hoping he wouldn't see (or hear) me as I clicked away. Later on I was able to confront him face to face (with the lens). And although we never once hugged, or held hands (because it made us both uncomfortable), or even shared a half gone jar of peanut butter (but he did fly past me in the Houston Marathon) I along with everyone else graduating this Spring will miss him. Good luck, Dr. Isle.

Fastwomen in action.

Paula Perry

The Jones Fastwomen Powderpuff team, in spite of itself, had a great season. Under the expert control of Corey Horton and Willie Mays, the team had a winning season of four wins, two losses and one tie. By far the most exciting game was the 13-12 victory over Lovett, decided in the last 20 seconds of the game. The team had a good mix of rookies and returning players. Generally speaking the defense got an unfair share of the veterans, wreaking havoc on the field and causing fear in the hearts of all powderpuff players across campus. The offense had a slightly different attack. Consisting almost entirely of new players, the side's object was to confuse. Not with tricky plays, however, but with a new tactic known as the quarterback shuffle. Over the course of seven games, the team went through four quarterbacks. Staci Patterson was the first followed by Cathy Jump. Both were injured during the play of the game. Carol Lauby, the star running back, stepped in as number three, only to get married (an obvious mistake in priorities), leaving Lori London the job.

JIBA!!!

For those of you who missed it, Jones pulled off the Beer-Bike miracle. For the first time ever, Jones' men won the race, breaking the team record for the 10-mile race by a full minute. Jones' women proved that top three isn't a bold prediction for last year's second to last place finishers. And the amazing alumni team, put together the day of the race, cruised with a surprising third (second?) place finish.

THE MEN

First position rider Mark Palmer set the tone for the race with his stellar 2:04 performance, improving upon his first mock race time by 17 seconds. Despite this dream ride, Jones was only in third place at that time. Second year captain Robert

THREE . . .

Palmer, riding second, kept Jones in the third position with a gutsy power ride. Jeannot "Pinch Me, I'm Dreaming" Pumilia shocked the crowd by leaving the pit third and entering it first. He said of his ride, "It was like a dream." That it was, for him and for the cheering Jones' fans.

The "slowest" rider on the team, ironman Paul Hain, who rode a 2:12, fell back during his third lap, but kept Jones in a strong third.

Walter Schmidt kept the momentum of the race going, remaining in the third spot. He also improved greatly on his previous best time, beating that by seven seconds.

The number six rider, John Graf, took advantage of a Will Rice five second penalty and the charged atmosphere to pull Jones into second place. Jones was lucky to have Graf available, because his awesome condition nearly took him to the National Swimming Championships on the race day.

The final four riders rode flawlessly, all reaching the 2:00 mark or lower.

Gerald Biehle, rider seven, rode a smart race, drafting until he could break away in his last lap. He put the team in a position to take first place.

Bob Montague, who plans to ride 10,000 miles this year, put one of those miles to good use by taking over first place temporarily from Lovett. At this point Will Rice was a non-factor, far back in third. Montague matched Mark Palmer for most improved rider on the team, also bettering his mock race time by 17 seconds.

Ron Jacobs made it look easy while he kept Jones right behind Lovett's Keith Winkeler. You know him, the asshole who signalled that Lovett was (we stress was) number one. Well, Ron took advantage of Keith's interesting riding tactics and came in slightly behind Winkeler, giving number ten rider Chris Brenno room to draft off Lovett anchor Jeff Wheelock.

What can we say about Chris? "He's a maniac," said Gretchen Wasserstrom, who is sitting here next to us. We are hard pressed to disagree. He simply rode out of his mind, at a spectacular 1:59, finishing ahead of Wheelock by two bike lengths.

The officials said that despite the bikers' incredible performance, Jones would not have won the race without the perfection in motion of the chug team, captained by Bill Vierick and Pat Martin.

The pit crew also made no errors in the race, hence preventing Jones from the fate of Will Rice.

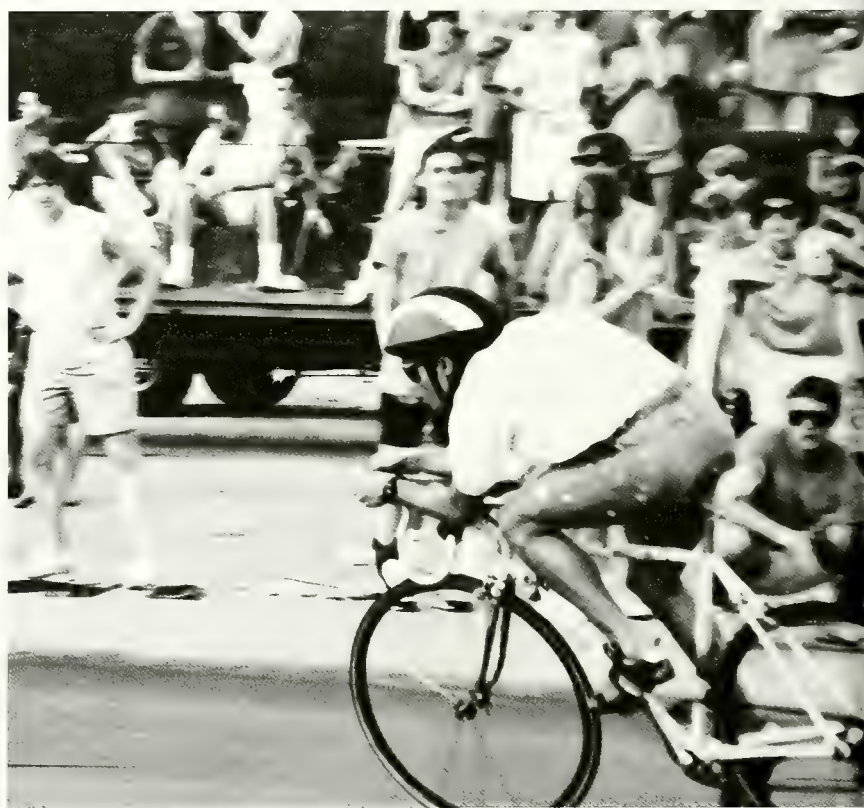

THE WOMEN

No penalties marred the women's race, either. It was simply a contest to see who was the best. Will Rice was the best. Hanszen was second best. Jones pulled off third, as predicted by Kath Wetmur, under the leadership of Cath Sargent and Evan Will, chug captains, and Andi Galt, Sarah Hoisington, and Wetmur, bike captains. "We don't do that," said Wetmur of the team's practicing regiment. News to us, we say, as we saw all the women riders improve drastically from mock race to race day.

Ron Jacobs is fast and the "Best Dressed."

Winning makes Andi Galt feel good all over.

Becky Abernethy started the race with a strong 1:33, riding back in a pack with no distinct leader.

Birthday girl Carol Gsell got her birthday wish by pulling Jones from back in the pack to a commanding second place. She also had a dry chug. What an Ironwoman!

Nika Kabiri rode her personal best on the track for the two-lap course, 1:34. She held on to the second spot, with no one challenging her.

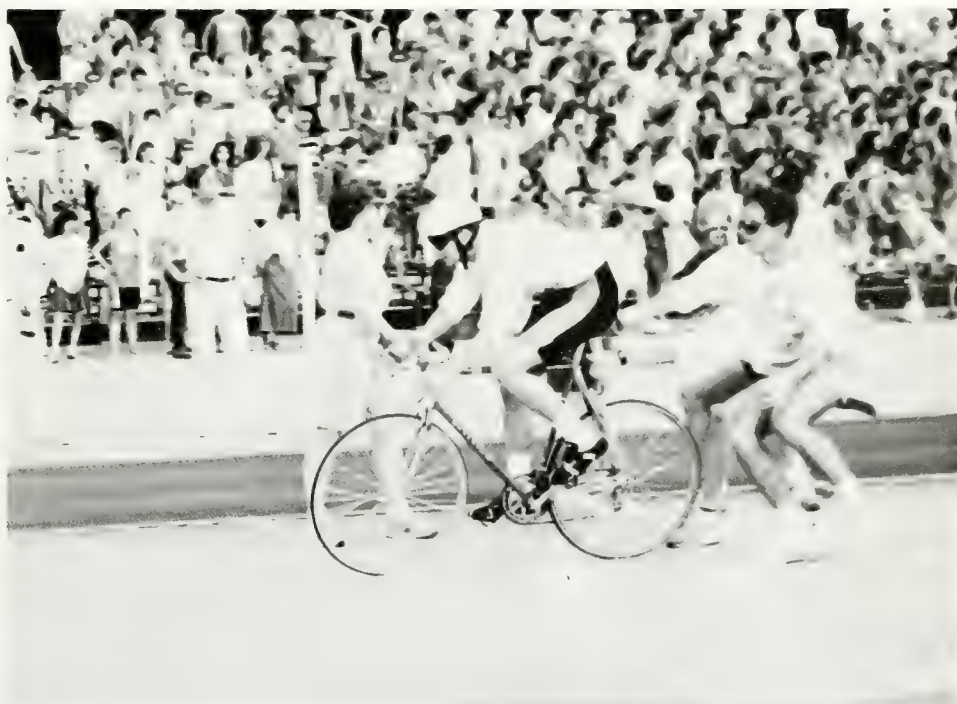

Rider four Tessa Ibarra, a late addition to the team, overcame her nervousness after her triathlon-related injuries to ride a speedy 1:35 and keep Jones in second.

Ana Blackmon, the number five rider, also rode a personal best of 1:36. She unfortunately had to ride against extremely fast Will Rice and Hanszen riders, and they pushed her into third. The bitches!

After this point Jones remained in third. But, man, did our women fly!

Sarah Hoisington tried to pull back into the second spot, but her best efforts were not quite enough to overtake the leaders.

Gretchen Wasserstrom, who last year rode 1:26, but this year had previously only ridden a 1:35, smoked the track. She seriously challenged Hanszen for second with her 1:26, but could not make her move.

Freshman sensation Alicia Bye joined the club of Jones Fast Women by bettering her best time by six seconds. She said that she was thrilled by her ride and can't wait to do it again.

Kathy Wetmur, whose mere presence on the track awes her fellow riders, matched her last year's time despite her many injuries, including a broken ankle.

And how could we not mention the anchor of the team, Andi Galt? Well, we could, but that would be rude, especially considering that everyone calls her "amazing." She was amazing at the race, nearly breaking into second, and finally breaking the 1:30 barrier she had been battling this year. She ended the exciting third place finish

Women's Bike Team: Ana Blackmon, Paula Perry, Nika Kabiri, Andi Galt, Robin Redford, Kathy Jump, Alicia Bye, Becky Abernathy, Gretchen Wasserstrom, Carol Gsell, Sarah Hoisington and Kathy Wetmur.

1. Economics is a lot more fun than Electrical Engineering.
2. It's not polite to string a person's belongings between North and South.
3. Chem 102 is even less fun than Electrical Engineering.
4. If you're going to be in the library after hours, don't get caught.

6. It's best to keep your fingers away from doorknobs slamming into walls.
7. The Rice Owls will win the SWC about as soon as the Jones men win Beer-Bike.
8. Supportive parents are, as we say in accounting, an asset.

If I had my Rice years to live over again, I would take more history and philosophy classes. I would sit at Willy's statue more often and for longer. I would skip more classes and read more real books. I would drink more beers at the pub. I would pull all-nighters. I would not worry so much about things beyond my control.

This year, Brown College was lucky to have Bernard and Carolyn Aresu stay an extra year as Masters to help with the smooth transition of Brown College from single-sex to co-ed. Brown will miss the Aresu's for their responsiveness to students, kindness, and sense of fun. The Aresu's have been Masters who have really enjoyed being around students, and the entire college from freshmen to alumni will miss the Aresu's and their son Christophe.

Next year Dr. John Brelsford of the Psychology Department and his wife, Carolyn, will take over as Master and Co-Master of Brown College for what is sure to be another great four years for Brown. Also Keith Cooper and Linda Torczon, both of the Computer Science Department and both married (to each other they keep assuring us) will be at Brown for another year as Resident Associates, and the ever helpful Mary Banister will continue to dispense mail, advice, and encouragement as Brown Office Secretary.

The Aresu's look forward to a relaxing year of travel during Doc A's sabbatical, and Brown College looks forward to a new, stimulating if not relaxing, year with the Brelsford's, Keith and Linda, Mary, new freshmen, semi-coed bathrooms, and a continuing sense of Brown College as our home.

POOR KID, LOST YET ANOTHER KITE.

We'd better run to catch the last tube or we'll end up having to go to Trafalger Sq. and wait for another damn night bus.

I never imagined that it would be so difficult to express my feelings about my years at Rice. The joys and pains, those who have made me think, wonder, laugh, cry and smile. What is most important is that we are forced to face our fears at the risk of experimenting with our lives. The greatest challenge is to look within ourselves, to find our strengths and then to reach out to others with patience, love, acceptance and kindness.

I thank my family, friends and faculty members who have helped me every step of the way. I hope in some way I have enriched your lives as much as you have mine. To have learned about myself and others and to have experienced the joy of giving has been my reward. These years I will never forget! Maribel Hernández

"she looked at the steady light, the pitiless, the remorseless, which was so much her, yet so little her, which had her at its beck and call (she woke in the night and saw it bent across their bed, stroking the floor), but for all that she thought, watching it in fascination, hypnotized, as if it were stroking with its silver fingers some sealed vessel in her brain whose bursting would flood her with delight, she had known happiness, exquisite happiness, intense happiness, and it silvered the rough waves a little more brightly, as daylight faded, and the blue went out of the sea and it rolled in waves of pure lemon which curved and swelled and broke upon the beach and the ecstasy burst in her eyes and waves of pure delight raced over the floor of her mind and she felt, it is enough! It is enough!"

Mrs. Ramsey, Virginia Woolf's To the Lighthouse

Although one quote to sum up one's Rice experience usually suffices (to be honest, this quote doesn't SUM UP (or even describe, to move away from the realm of numerical imagery) my four years at Rice, but I like it anyway), I felt compelled to include these words of wisdom from The Little Prince: "But certainly, for us who understand life, figures are a matter of indifference." Spoken like a true academ. I bet the author of this fine book doesn't balance his checkbook either. But I digress (which is a rare occurrence).
Thanks, Susan, for sharing my best laughs and for wisely understanding my deepest woes.
You win my General Foods International Coffee Certificate for Life I'd also like to thank

If there's one thing that I've learned here, it's that I'm not ready for the real world. After all... I still haven't thrown a large appliance off 6th floor.

To all the people who have made my years here so... well, interesting, my thanks and love. Especially Edie, Hania, Daan, Mark, Chuck Su, Paul (my favorite O.C. buddy), Prad, Phuong, Alex, Steve (my favorite advisor), Jeff K. & Amy H., Glenn, Todd n. Dave, Leo (my favorite next door neighbor), CKS.

And he starts to walk.

If our friendship depends on things like time and space, then when we finally overcome space and time, we've destroyed our own brotherhood.
But overcome space, and all we have left is time. Overcome time, and all we have left is now.
And in the middle of here and now, don't you think that we might see each other once or twice.

Now the day is finally here.
That after all these years,
It's time to part with friends

Through you, I have finally grown;
I can make it on my own,
And now at last this day belongs to me!

Thanks to all my teachers and friends who have made this day possible. Thanks John, Ed, Steve, Allison, seventh floor buds, and my friends at the BSU. Thanks Mom and Dad! And most of all, I thank God for being with me every step of the way.

The goals of GALOR are to facilitate social interaction, provide educational services and encourage personal growth. We welcome participation by all within the Rice community who share these goals.

During the last school year, we have participated in panel discussions in three classes, aided in the production of the sex education pamphlets which will be available to all undergraduates soon, and hosted numerous educational speakers. We have had several parties and smaller social events including the campus-wide "Think Pink" party in March. The group also sponsored "Rocky Horror" with Brown College as a fund raiser for the AIDS Foundation Houston.

All Tangled Up

That's All Folks!

Be Prepared Next Year!

The CAMPANILE Does Not Print Mug Shots!!!

Yes, you remember those horrible school days' photographs. Say cheese and you were recorded for posterity: braces and closed eyes forever. We at the Campanile take a different approach to photographs: we try and capture the Rice student in his natural habitat. Although your eyes might still be closed and we can't erase your braces, at least you'll be with your best friend. Or in your own room. Or in a place you probably recognize.

It's a pretty good system, but there is one problem: we can't always guarantee that everyone gets in the book. And then people get mad at us and come yell. Now, we agree that everyone who wants to should have a chance to be in the yearbook. SO, we made it easy on you. Thanks to Scott Flanigan and Shannon Fowler, our "You Ought to be in Pictures" event was well-publicized, and lots of people showed up in the RMC to have their photos taken.

It was an interesting day. We purposely chose a Thursday, because of Thursday night at the pub. Look closely at the photos; you'll see the band that was playing that night, members of a wedding party, and the minister who married them. Some people came really well prepared, with all sorts of props. Others didn't. We hope that next year, everyone will try and out do this year's photos.

Until then, We and our last subject, Jack "Duct Tape" McKinney, bid you farewell.

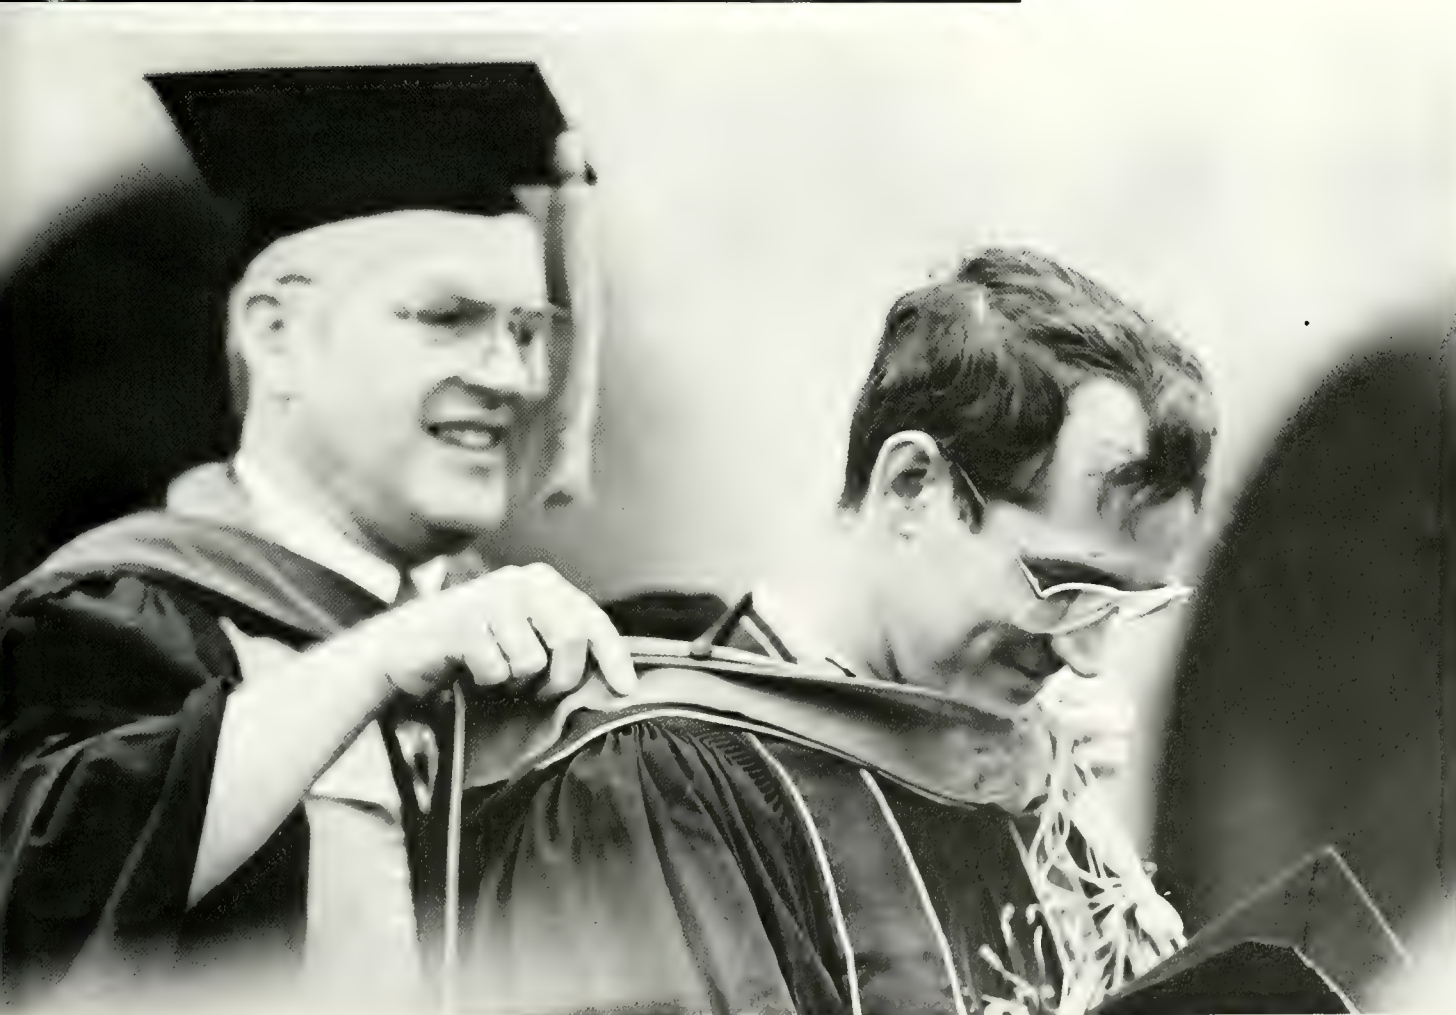

Our spectacular Publicity Hounds: Shannon Fowler and Scott Flanigan

*You're

*You're looking for

Consider the criteria by which any employer should be measured. Like its commitment to building a diverse, capable employee base. Its record for promotion from within. Its viability in the marketplace. And its location in an environment with a high quality of life.

Betz Laboratories, specializing in the engineered chemical treatment of water and wastewater, measures up to each of those criteria – and more. Situated just outside Houston, in the Woodlands, Texas, we are consistently and increasingly profitable. Large enough to provide excellent compensation packages, with educational reimbursement and a profit sharing program. But small enough to recognize achievement.

So if you have a degree in Chemistry, Chemical Engineering or Computer Science, look closer at Betz Labs. For career opportunities that are almost made to measure.

TEAMS

No Pass-No Play. Educational reform. It's back to the basics in the classroom. And The Houston Chronicle, The Dallas Morning News and The San Antonio Express-News have joined forces to help Texas teachers and students.

We've developed the TEAMS (Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills) Game Plan. A curriculum packet for teaching the basic reading, writing and math skills for grades 1, 3, 5, 7, 9 and 12. This educational tool meets the curriculum requirements of House Bill 72 and helps teachers prepare students for the TEAMS test at each grade level. For more information call The Chronicle

Special Thanks to: Lise Jacobsen, for teaching the section eds about layout. Scott Flanigan and Shannon Fowler for publicity. Kathi, the Taylor rep. And especially to our roommates and friends: Scott, Matt, Pat, and Paul — for heavy box moving and emotional support. Good luck to Leigh, the inheritor of the madness.
